PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

On March 2, 2022, Representative Hill introduced H.R. 6899, the “Russia and Belarus SDR Exchange Prohibition Act of 2022”, which would prohibit the Secretary of the Treasury from providing U.S. dollars in exchange for any Special Drawing Rights held by the Russian Federation or Belarus. It also mandates that the Secretary of the Treasury vigorously advocate that other governments which hold freely usable currencies similarly refuse to convert any Special Drawing Rights held by the Russian Federation or Belarus into a hard currency. The legislation also mandates the Secretary of the Treasury to instruct the U.S. representative at each international financial institution (such as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank) to oppose the provision of financial assistance from the respective institution to the Russian Federation and Belarus, except to address the basic human needs of the civilian population. These mandates would terminate on the earlier of the date that is 5 years after the date of enactment of the bill or 30 days after the President certifies that the governments of the Russian Federation and Belarus have ceased destabilizing activities with respect to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Ukraine. The bill provides the President the authority to waive any provisions of the bill if the President certifies that doing so would be in the national interest of the United States.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

Special Drawing Rights (SDRs) are a special reserve asset of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) distributed to each member country in proportion to its shareholding in the Fund. Countries can hold their SDRs as part of their precautionary reserve balances or convert them into hard currency to finance balance of payments needs, pay for imports, adjust the composition of their reserves, or pay back IMF loans. In August 2021, the IMF approved a $650 billion allocation of SDRs, of which $275 billion went to emerging market and developing countries to help transform the global pandemic crisis into a fair and resilient economic recovery.

Russia and Belarus did receive their legal share of the recent SDR allocation, raising concerns that the allocation would provide unconditional liquidity these countries who are acting against U.S. interests. However, the Department of Treasury has noted that it has the right to refuse to exchange SDRs for any nation whose policies the U.S. opposes, and that maintaining such a policy will help ensure that Russia and Belarus will not be able to use any of their SDR allocations. In fact, to date, Belarus has not used any of its new SDR holdings, and Russia continues to hold virtually all of its recently acquired SDRs as well. Given the recent G7 sanctions against transactions with Russia's central bank, and the raft of new sanctions against Belarus, it would be difficult for any country to convert the SDRs of either country without running afoul of international sanctions. This bill would reinforce the Biden Administration's existing policy and help ensure that Russia and Belarus cannot use any of their SDRs as long as the illegal invasion of Ukraine persists.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Short title

- This section establishes the short title of the bill as the “Russia and Belarus SDR Exchange Prohibition Act of 2022.”

Section 2.

- This section prohibits the Treasury Secretary from participating in an exchange of Russian or Belarussian held Special Drawing Rights (SDRs) and directs the Treasury Secretary to vigorously advocate that member countries of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) also prohibit the exchange of such SDRs.
- This section also directs the Treasury Secretary to instruct the U.S. Executive Directors at each of the International Financial Institutions to use their voice and vote to oppose any financial assistance to the Russian Federation and Belarus, except to address humanitarian needs.
- This section sunsets the bill on the earlier of 5 years after enactment or 30 days after the President certifies that Russia has ceased its destabilizing activities with respect to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Ukraine.
- The bill also authorizes the President to waive the application of this section if it is in the national interest of the U.S.

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, and pursuant to clause 3(c)(3) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Committee has received the following estimate for H.R. 6899 from the Director of the Congressional Budget Office:

The bill would direct the department to encourage other IMF members to follow suit and to oppose any non-humanitarian assistance for Russia and Belarus provided by international financial institutions such as the IMF and World Bank.

On the basis of information about the costs of similar diplomatic efforts to influence the actions of other nations, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 6899 would cost less than $500,000 over the 2022–2026 period. Such spending would be subject to the availability of appropriated funds.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Sunita D'Monte. The estimate was reviewed by Leo Lex, Deputy Director of Budget Analysis.
